

How Did Early College High Schools Affect Students' Postsecondary Outcomes?

Early College students were significantly more likely than control students to enroll in college and earn a college degree within six years after expected high school graduation.

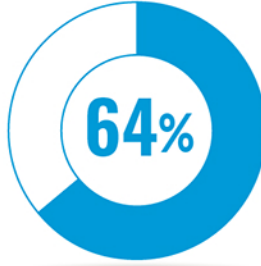

POSTSECONDARY ENROLLMENT RATES

More than
THREE IN FIVE

Early College students enrolled in college by the end of high school

Early College students

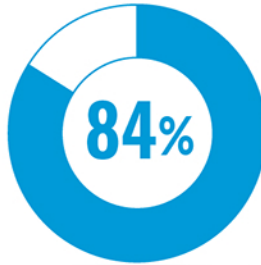

Control students

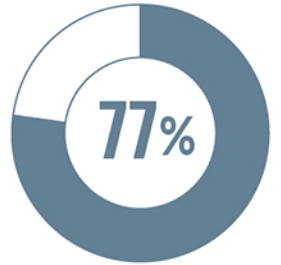

More than
FOUR IN FIVE

Early College students enrolled in college within six years after high school

Early College students

Control students

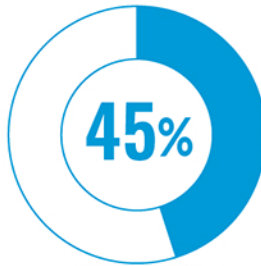

POSTSECONDARY COMPLETION RATES

More than
TWO IN FIVE

Early College students completed a college degree within six years after high school

Early College students

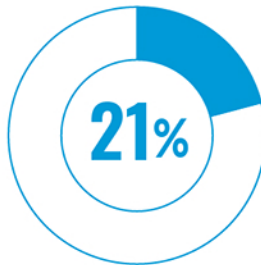

Control students

More than
ONE IN FIVE

Early College students completed a bachelor's degree within four years after high school

Early College students

Control students

Note: The study participants entered Early College admissions lotteries between 2005-06 and 2007-08. The Early College students were randomly offered admission and the control students were not offered admission.

SOURCE: Early College, Continued Success: Longer-Term Impact of Early College High Schools (2019)